3. Prosecutor of the Year Award

a) The aim of the Prosecutor of the Year Award is to give recognition and encouragement to front-line prosecutors, who have demonstrated outstanding performance in their work, domestically or internationally,

- in combating crime in the conduct of the investigation or the prosecution, or
- in defending the independence and integrity of prosecutors, or
- in successfully promoting international cooperation and/or human rights, or
- in significantly contributing to improving the effectiveness of the criminal justice system.

b) The award may be given to no more than 5 recipients annually, except in special circumstances the award may be given to more than 5 recipients. It may be given to individual prosecutors who are involved in the investigation and/or prosecution of criminal matters up to the level of those directly in charge e.g. team leaders, regardless of whether he or she is a member of the IAP or not.

6. Application procedure

a) Recommendations for any of the above award and decorations may be made by an individual or organisational member of the IAP.

Candidates for the Special Achievement Award and the Prosecutor of the Year Award will normally be nominated and recommended by organisational members. A nomination by at least three individual members may also be considered, if the nomination is supported by the head of the candidate's organisation or under other special circumstances. The recommendation should include details about any Award that has previously been given to a candidate for one of the two awards for similar achievements or work.

b) Recommendations should be sent to the Secretary-General with a brief written account explaining how the nomination meets the criteria established in this protocol. For the Prosecutor of the Year Award a special nomination form must be used, with supporting material of no more than two pages describing the factual account and the outcome of the outstanding performance of the candidate attached to the form.

c) The deadline for submission of recommendations to the Secretary-General is 2 months before the Northern Spring Meeting of the Executive Committee. The Committee may decide to waive this deadline.
